Ron:

Thank you for the detailed update - it is greatly appreciated.

So that you are aware, under the EPA's Audit Policy and New Owner Audit Policy (which provided many of the guiding principles for the Oil and Gas New Owner Audit Program), the EPA does not consider potential violations disclosed after submission of an annual Title V certification (what I believe you are referring to with, "Title V deviation report") as voluntarily discovered and eligible for Audit Policy consideration. See FAQ #2 and the EPA's response and the discussion about Voluntary Discovery - Condition 2 on the EPA's webpage that provides an overview of the New Owner Audit Policy ("EPA's Interim Approach to Applying the Audit Policy to New Owners").

We are always available for a phone conversation if you would like to discuss anything in further detail.

Thanks -

Tim

Subject: EPA Oil and Gas New Owner Audit Program

Tim,

I saw your recent voice message. As you might expect, I have encountered some difficulties in getting this effort rolling. I have not provided you a status update before now, for what will appear to be obvious reasons.

However, as we are nearing the end of the year when a status report for the Title V program is required and nearing the deadline where we need to get this effort initiated, I am hoping to get this moving and completed in time to meet these deadlines.

While no real excuse for my tardiness, the following are the issues I have wrestled with in getting this project moving forward.

Legal Support - I have gotten minimal interest from our in-house legal staff, who were occupied with recent mergers, acquisitions and bond issues.

Recent Audit - last year we completed a TCEQ audit of most of our operations in Eagle Ford field, with support by outside counsel. The cost of the outside support was significantly higher than expected. This was my reason for looking at internal legal support. I have not found a champion who want to authorize the outside counsel. This being said, I believe that the Title V deviation report deadline may get this going, nevertheless the legal aspects of this audit is a problem.

TCEQ concerns. As happened in your case, my preliminary discussions with TCEQ indicate that they are reluctant to accept our audit as being for a new owner/operator as we were a previous owner and our ownership did not change. We want their buyoff when going forward, which, of course, will require another series of discussions with them

Contractual Issues - The prior operator of the relevant site is still operating well sites and another facility in half of this field, of which we are a minority partner. They are also sending gas from some of their facilities to this site. The prior operator thinks they have operated the facility fully in compliance with their permits. Our contracts staff had not been eager to "Throw them under the bus" when we initiate this effort, and, therefore, have not given us much support. They think we can begin to operate the facility as we believe it should be operated and ignore prior compliance issues

Consultants capable of addressing vent header issues - As I noted in a prior call, in Texas we seem to have a lack of companies who can demonstrate that they can handle the NSPS OOOOa compliance review. Texas companies have referred us to Colorado, but they seem reluctant to commit to such an activity in south Texas without extra incentives. I was working on expanding the effort to other locations, but we have had few that are under the NSPS OOOOa program, though many would come into play if the latest technical revision that includes a new interpretation of a 'Modification'.

It goes without saying that I am disappointed not to have this activity well underway if not completed, but I am scheduled to meet with our Land Manager (Contracts) next week to discuss the approach.

Ron:

I write to follow up on my recent voicemail. We have not heard from Murphy Oil for over two months about whether or not it intends to proceed with an audit under the EPA's Oil and Gas New Owner Audit Program. Given this passage of time, we are interpreting Murphy's silence as an indication that it is no longer interested in proceeding under the New Owner Audit Program. Please contact us should you have any questions regarding this matter.

Hi, Ron.

We write to confirm whether Murphy intends to proceed with an audit under the EPA's Oil and Gas New Owner Audit Program. It is fine if Murphy has decided that it is not going to proceed with an audit under the Program. But, we would appreciate confirmation regarding Murphy's decision. Please advise, and please contact us should you have any questions.

Hi, Ron.

We have not heard back from you in a while and we wanted to check in to see if you had any questions or any updates on timing for when Murphy might be in a position to finalize the Agreement.

Thanks -

Hi, Ron.

We write to check in to see where Murphy is with reviewing the proposed Agreement. Our management is asking about the anticipated timeline for finalizing the Agreement. Thanks in advance for your response, and please contact us should you or any of your colleagues have questions about the Agreement and the audit that you would like to discuss further with us.

Thank you for taking time to speak with us today.

The hyperlinks below contain information on storage tanks that you referenced during our discussion:

Colorado Storage Tank and Vapor Control System Guidelines webpage; and Noble's EPA-DOJ-Colorado settlement webpage (we believe that you were referring to the End of Phase Reports which are linked on the settlement webpage).

We look forward to our next discussion. In the meantime, please contact us with any questions.

Thanks again -
